

CONNECTICUT BANKERS ASSOCIATION

Zunera Mazhar serves as the Deputy Director for National Financial Institution Diversity Strategy at FDIC. In this role, Zunera assesses diversity policies and strategies that contribute to building a more diverse, inclusive, and equitable banking ecosystem of the future. Zunera recently served as the inaugural Deputy Chief Innovation Officer for FDIC where she lead FDITECH in emerging technology and interagency activities including Digital Assets, Artificial Intelligence and Quantum policies.

Prior to the FDIC, Zunera served as the Chief of Staff at the U.S. Department of Education where she co-led the Diversity, Equity & Inclusion (DEI) council.

Previously, she was Chief of Communications at the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration where she worked on creating several diversity programs. Prior to her federal service, she held several senior level positions with a number of financial institutions.

Zunera holds an Executive MBA from Quantic School of Business and a degree in Economics from George Mason University.
